

Could new trade probes lead to additional tariffs on solar panels?

Log in to keep reading or access research tools. Renewable energy trade groups are bracing for more upheaval around US solar imports, including possible new trade probes that could lead to additional tariffs on foreign-made panels.

Will trade affect Europe's solar power targets?

Europe produces fewer than 3 per cent of the solar panels needed to hit the bloc's 2030 solar power targets. Developers fear implementing trade measures could hit supply and hold up projects.

Are trade barriers hurting the solar industry?

Speaking at Arctech's headquarters in Kunshan, an industrial city west of Shanghai, Zhou said the onset of trade barriers was unfairly hitting manufacturers of more advanced technologies that did not have excess output. Zhou argued that most companies in the solar industry with overcapacity problems were producing mass market technologies.

Does Solarpower Europe support trade measures?

However, SolarPower Europe, an industry body that counts Chinese telecoms company Huawei among its members, has publicly campaigned against trade measures. "We have repeatedly warned that EU and national policymakers must rapidly act with real solutions," said SolarPower Europe chief executive Walburga Hemetsberger.

Are cheap solar panels undermining US tariff protections?

The caution comes amid escalating concern from US solar manufacturers that surging imports of cheap panels are undermining existing tariff protections and government efforts to boost domestic production.

Will reintroduction of trade measures affect solar projects?

Developers fear implementing trade measures could hit supply and hold up projects. Henning Rath, chief supply chain officer at German solar installer Enpal, which sources solar panels from China, said the reintroduction of protectionist measures would disrupt the market.
