How do you use a curling iron?

Hold the iron in place for five to seven seconds to allow the heat to penetrate your hair and set the curl. To release each curl, simply rotate your wrist in the opposite direction. Voluminous waves are always a popular style, and they are easily achievable using a curling iron. Simply curl each section of hair while holding the iron horizontally.

How do you curl hair on a curling iron?

Choose the direction you want the hair to curl, either toward your face or away from your face. Focus on keeping the section flat while wrapping it around your curling iron. Remember, don't twist the hair around the iron. Continue to wrap the hair around the iron until you get to the ends.

Can I curl my hair with a flat iron?

We recommend practicing with your curling iron or flat iron in the OFF position. This will allow you to practice these new curling hair techniques without burning yourself. After you feel confident, you can turn on the heat and begin to curl your hair. Always apply a heat protectant spray when you curl hair.

How hot should a curling iron be?

As a general rule, stick to between 120°C-185°C for fine hair, 185°C for medium hair, and up to 210°C for thick hair. If hair is really fragile and damaged, consider a tool that uses low heat and airflow to curl hair (our Dyson Airwrap review can help with that.) Material: Curling irons are coated with various materials.

How do you curl away from the face with a curling iron?

If you want to curl away from the face, twist and wrap in the outwards direction from your face. Wrap the entire twisted section around your curling iron and let it heat up. Remove your curling iron and allow the curl to cool. Once your entire head is curled, shake the curls out with your fingers to loosen and add more volume.
