

What is the new Levo SL?

The launch of the new Levo SL puts Specialized back into the mix, thanks to updated geometry and motor technology. It's now essentially a motorized version of the Stumpjumper EVO, complete with the highly adjustable geometry that helped make that bike such a hit.

How high should a levo bracket be?

Bottom bracket height can be fine-tuned up or down by 7mm. Levo's 150mm of rear travel is supple on small bumps, devours square-edged hits without a twitch, eats massive G-outs for breakfast, yet still offers amazing pedal response and delivers your power to the ground with total efficiency.

How good is a levo SL?

Levo SL is lean and responsive enough to pop, flick, and whip, but tough enough to take the hits. Dial in the geometry on your Levo SL with three headtube angle options and mixed-wheel set up (or not). Ride Dynamic Tuned Suspension gives a range of intelligent support over chatter to bottomless-plush bliss on the big hits.

Does the levo SL have a specialized app?

Specialized App for customisation - The Levo SL fully integrates with our Specialized app, allowing you to personalise motor characteristics, manage range efficiently, and secure your bike with Turbo System Auto-Lock. Discover the ultimate trail bike with Specialized Turbo Levo SL Expert Carbon.

What is a levo SL SW frame?

All new Levo SL SW Frame, Fact 11m carbon, carbon shock extension, 150mm travel, adjustable head angle, BB height, 12x148mm UDH compatible rear spacing, and compatible with 27.5 or 29" wheels. Alloy, 38.6mm

How much power does a levo SL have?

It delivers 33% more power (320 Watts) than its predecessor with a supernatural feel, while 43% more torque (50Nm). The Levo SL delivers unmatched ride quality and capability, amplified. For the trail rider who craves serpentine singletrack, sending it skyward, and lives for advancing your skills and fitness. Meet your new bike, the Levo SL.
