

It has a Heliotrope RV-30 solar controller and dual battery charger, but it seems flaky. It often shows battery voltage between 17-38V, and the chassis and house batteries are connected backward (I.e. chassis voltage is from house batteries). I think it has a chassis battery trickle charger but it isn't labeled so who maybe it's not (pictured).

Was wondering if it made any sense to increase the solar on the roof of the coach (obviously lots of sun down here to soak up) & if doing so would offset a portion of our monthly electric bill? My guess is that the house batteries (12v side) impact our electric bill minimally. ... the opportunity to generate solar power is mainly limited to the ...

The Monaco SunReel is a stylish fixed reel with a German-manufactured 12V electric motor powered by a solar charged battery. The slim control box is made from 316 stainless steel, vented and IP67 rated (safe for outdoor use), with a large solar collector for trickle charging attached to it.

LSBEH; so more solar so your batteries charge more quickly. We have about 12 hrs of sun right now (spring equinox) but even so, solar production isn't much before 10am nor after 3pm; On your Alaska trip, latitude works against you, not for you (low sun angle). I would still count on 5 hrs/day. More clouds as you venture north, too.
